

15. Answer: B

The intensity of a wave is directly proportional to the square of its amplitude. Hence, when amplitude is halved, the intensity is quartered.

The frequency of the wave does not change between medium. Hence, its speed is directly proportional to its wavelength, according to $v = f\lambda$.