

|    |   |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
|----|---|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
|    |   |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| 9  | A | Angular velocity, <math>v = r\omega</math> $\omega = \frac{v}{r}$ $= \frac{v}{\frac{mv}{Be}}$ $= \frac{Be}{m}$ Angular velocity is independent of <math>v</math>, and is directly proportional to <math>B</math>. |
| 10 | B | Since the gravitational field strength is uniform near the surface of a planet                                                                                                                                                  |